A solid floor is preferable, or putting the pool in the corner of a room with joists that are rot-free, where there is more support. We cannot guarantee that your floor will support the weight of the birth pool. You may want to get an inspection of your joists and floorboards from a wood preservation company, particularly if your house is old and you have not had such an inspection recently. Further details are available to view here: <https://www.birthpoolinabox.co.uk/personal-pools/birth-pool-in-a-box-design-and-spec>
